

Snow White's Royal Wedding

With just one kiss, Snow White awoke. The Prince lifted her atop his horse, and together they journeyed toward his castle.

Turning back, Snow White blew a kiss to her beloved friends the Seven Dwarfs.

“Don’t worry,” said the Prince to Snow White.
“You’ll be able to see your friends again. In fact, I was hoping for an outdoor wedding.”

“Oh my!” said Snow White. “A wedding?”

The Prince helped Snow White from the saddle. "Forgive me," he said. "I spoke too soon. Will you do me the honor of becoming my wife?"

When she said yes, he tied a pretty little flower around her finger. "I'll give you a better ring later," the Prince added.

Snow White nodded. But she thought the flower would serve as a wonderful wedding ring forever!

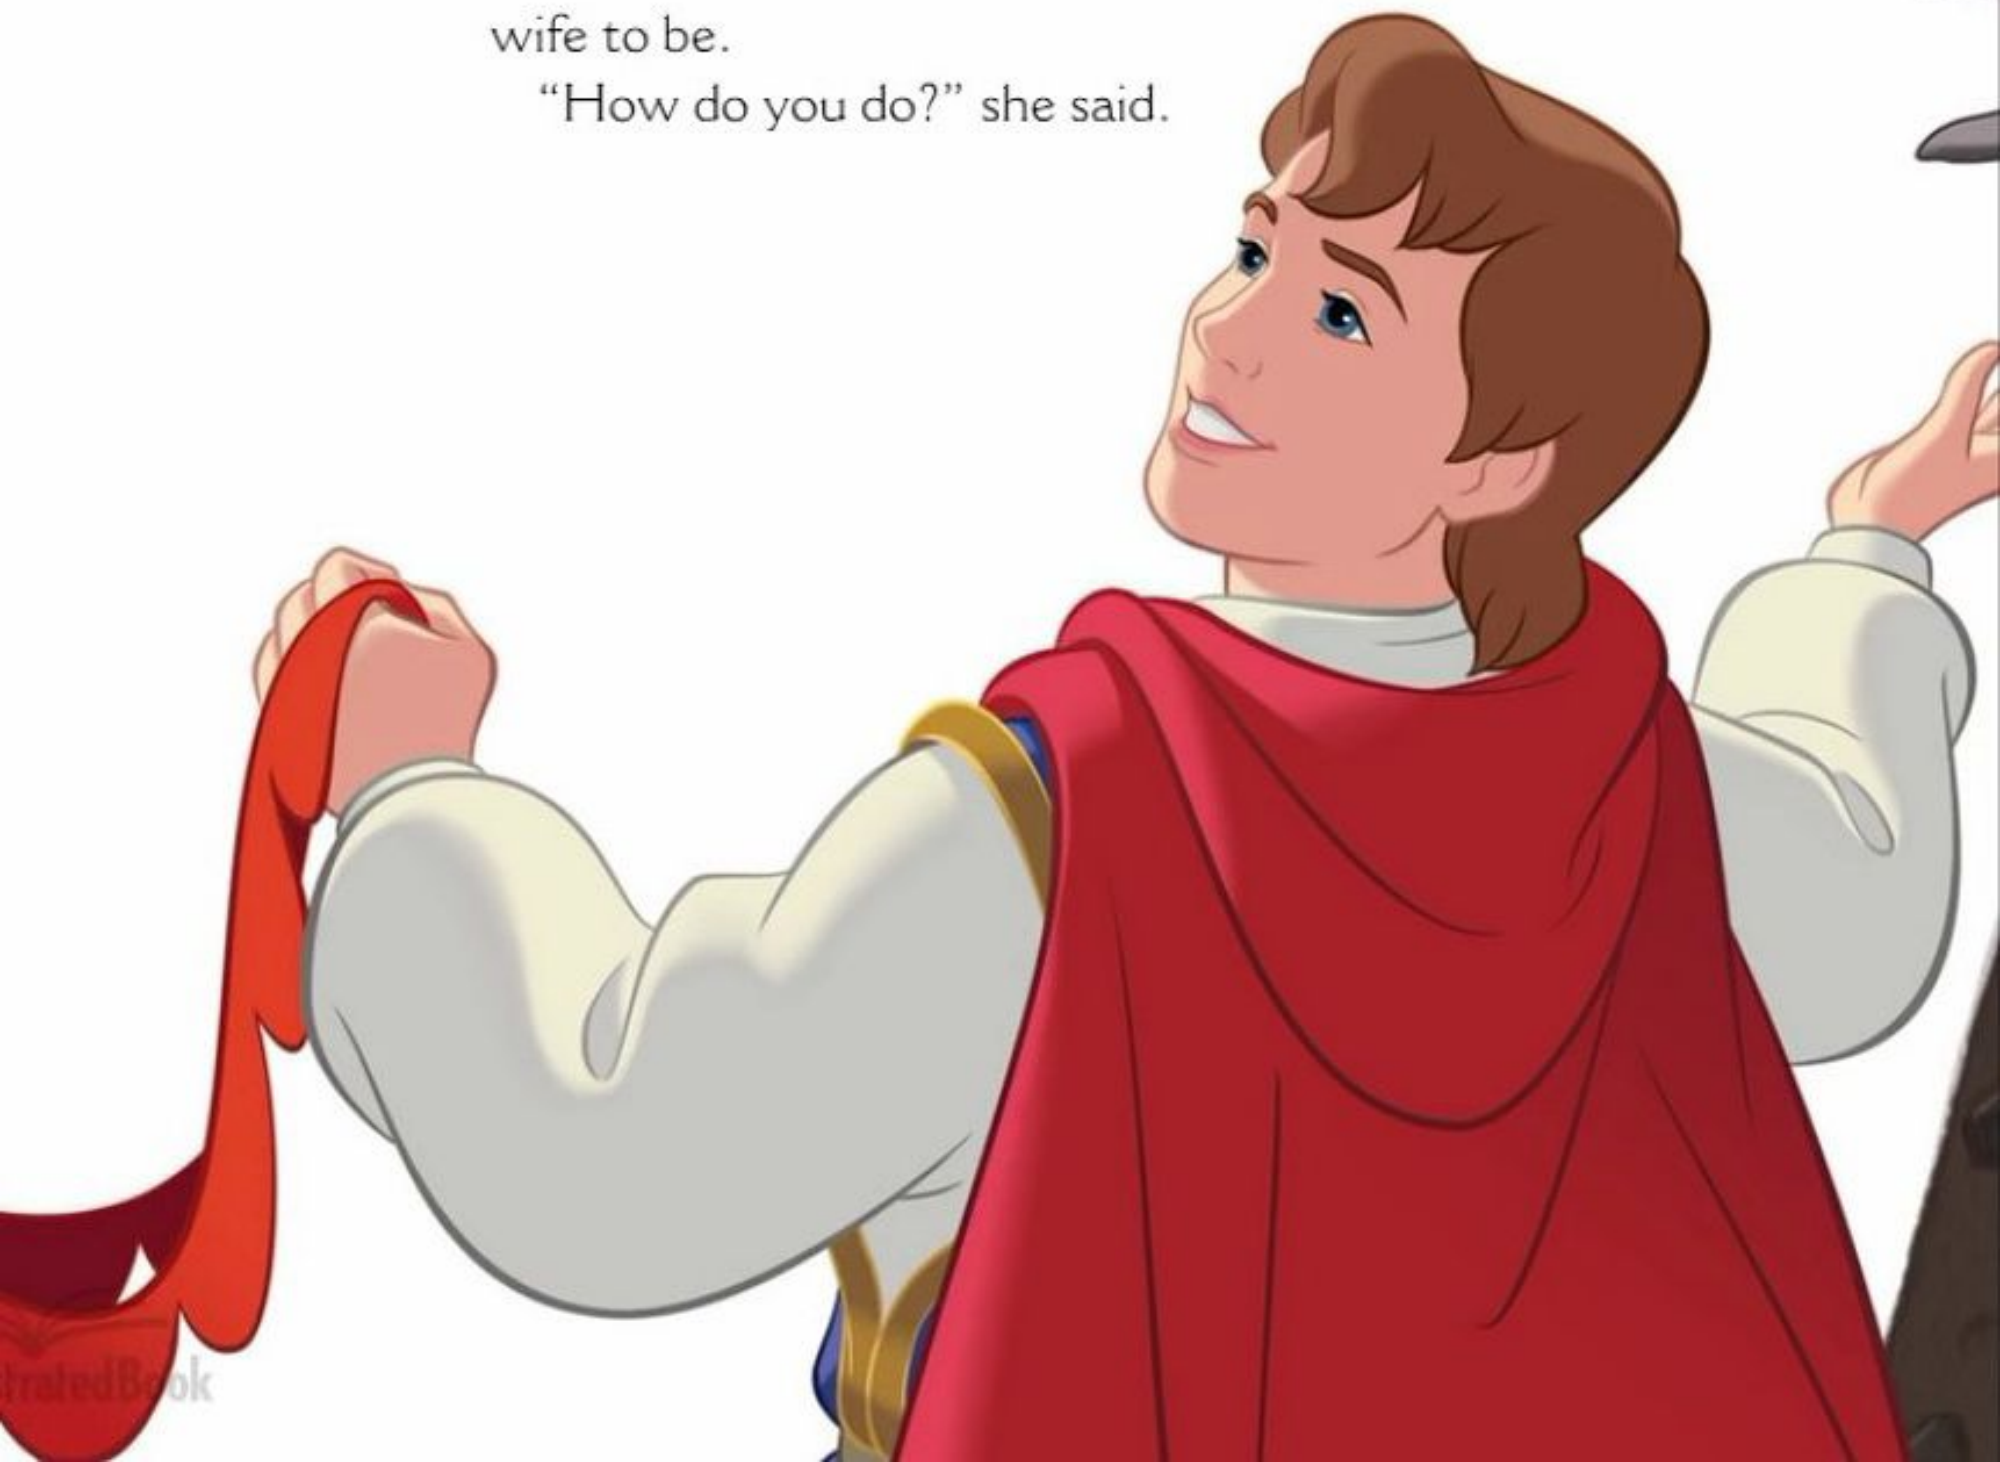

As they arrived at the castle, the royal gates opened wide. "Welcome home! Long live the Prince!" shouted the people.

The Prince smiled and introduced Snow White as his wife to be.

"How do you do?" she said.

The Prince's staff didn't waste a moment. They bustled all around Snow White.

"You'll need a dress!"

"A royal wedding carriage!"

“And a cake!”

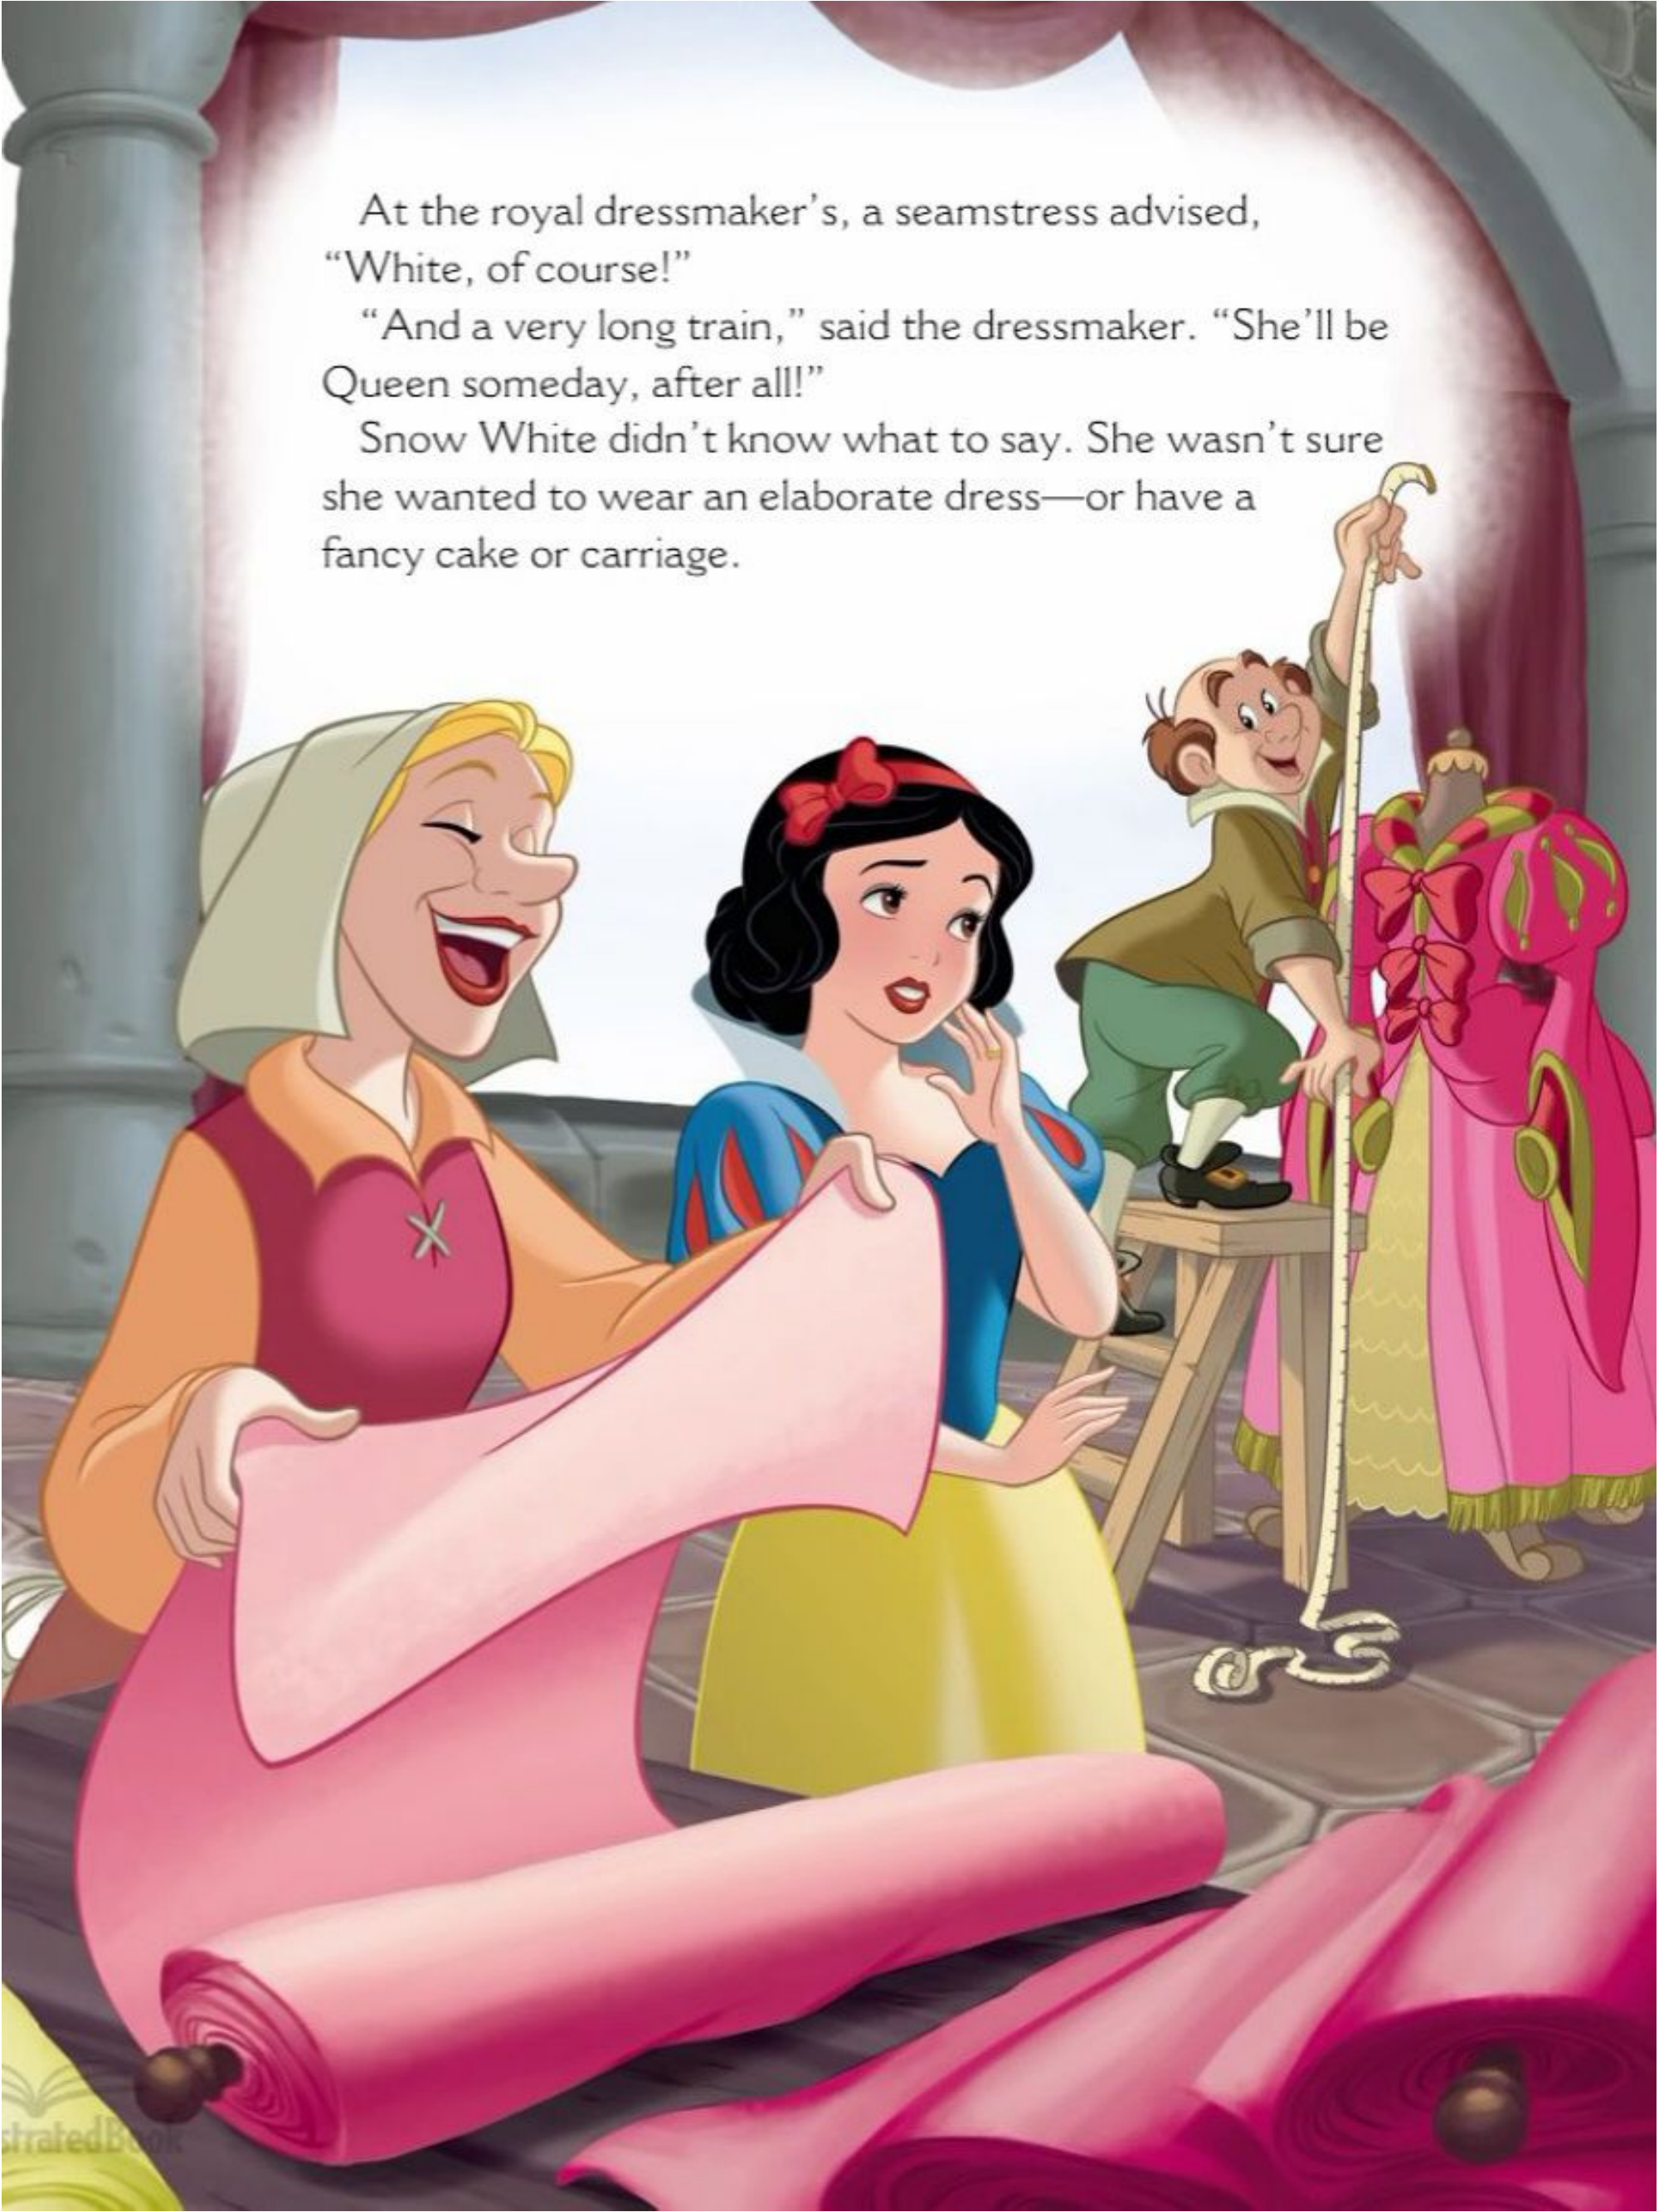

"Why don't you start with your dress?" the Prince shouted. "I'm off to find you a ring!"

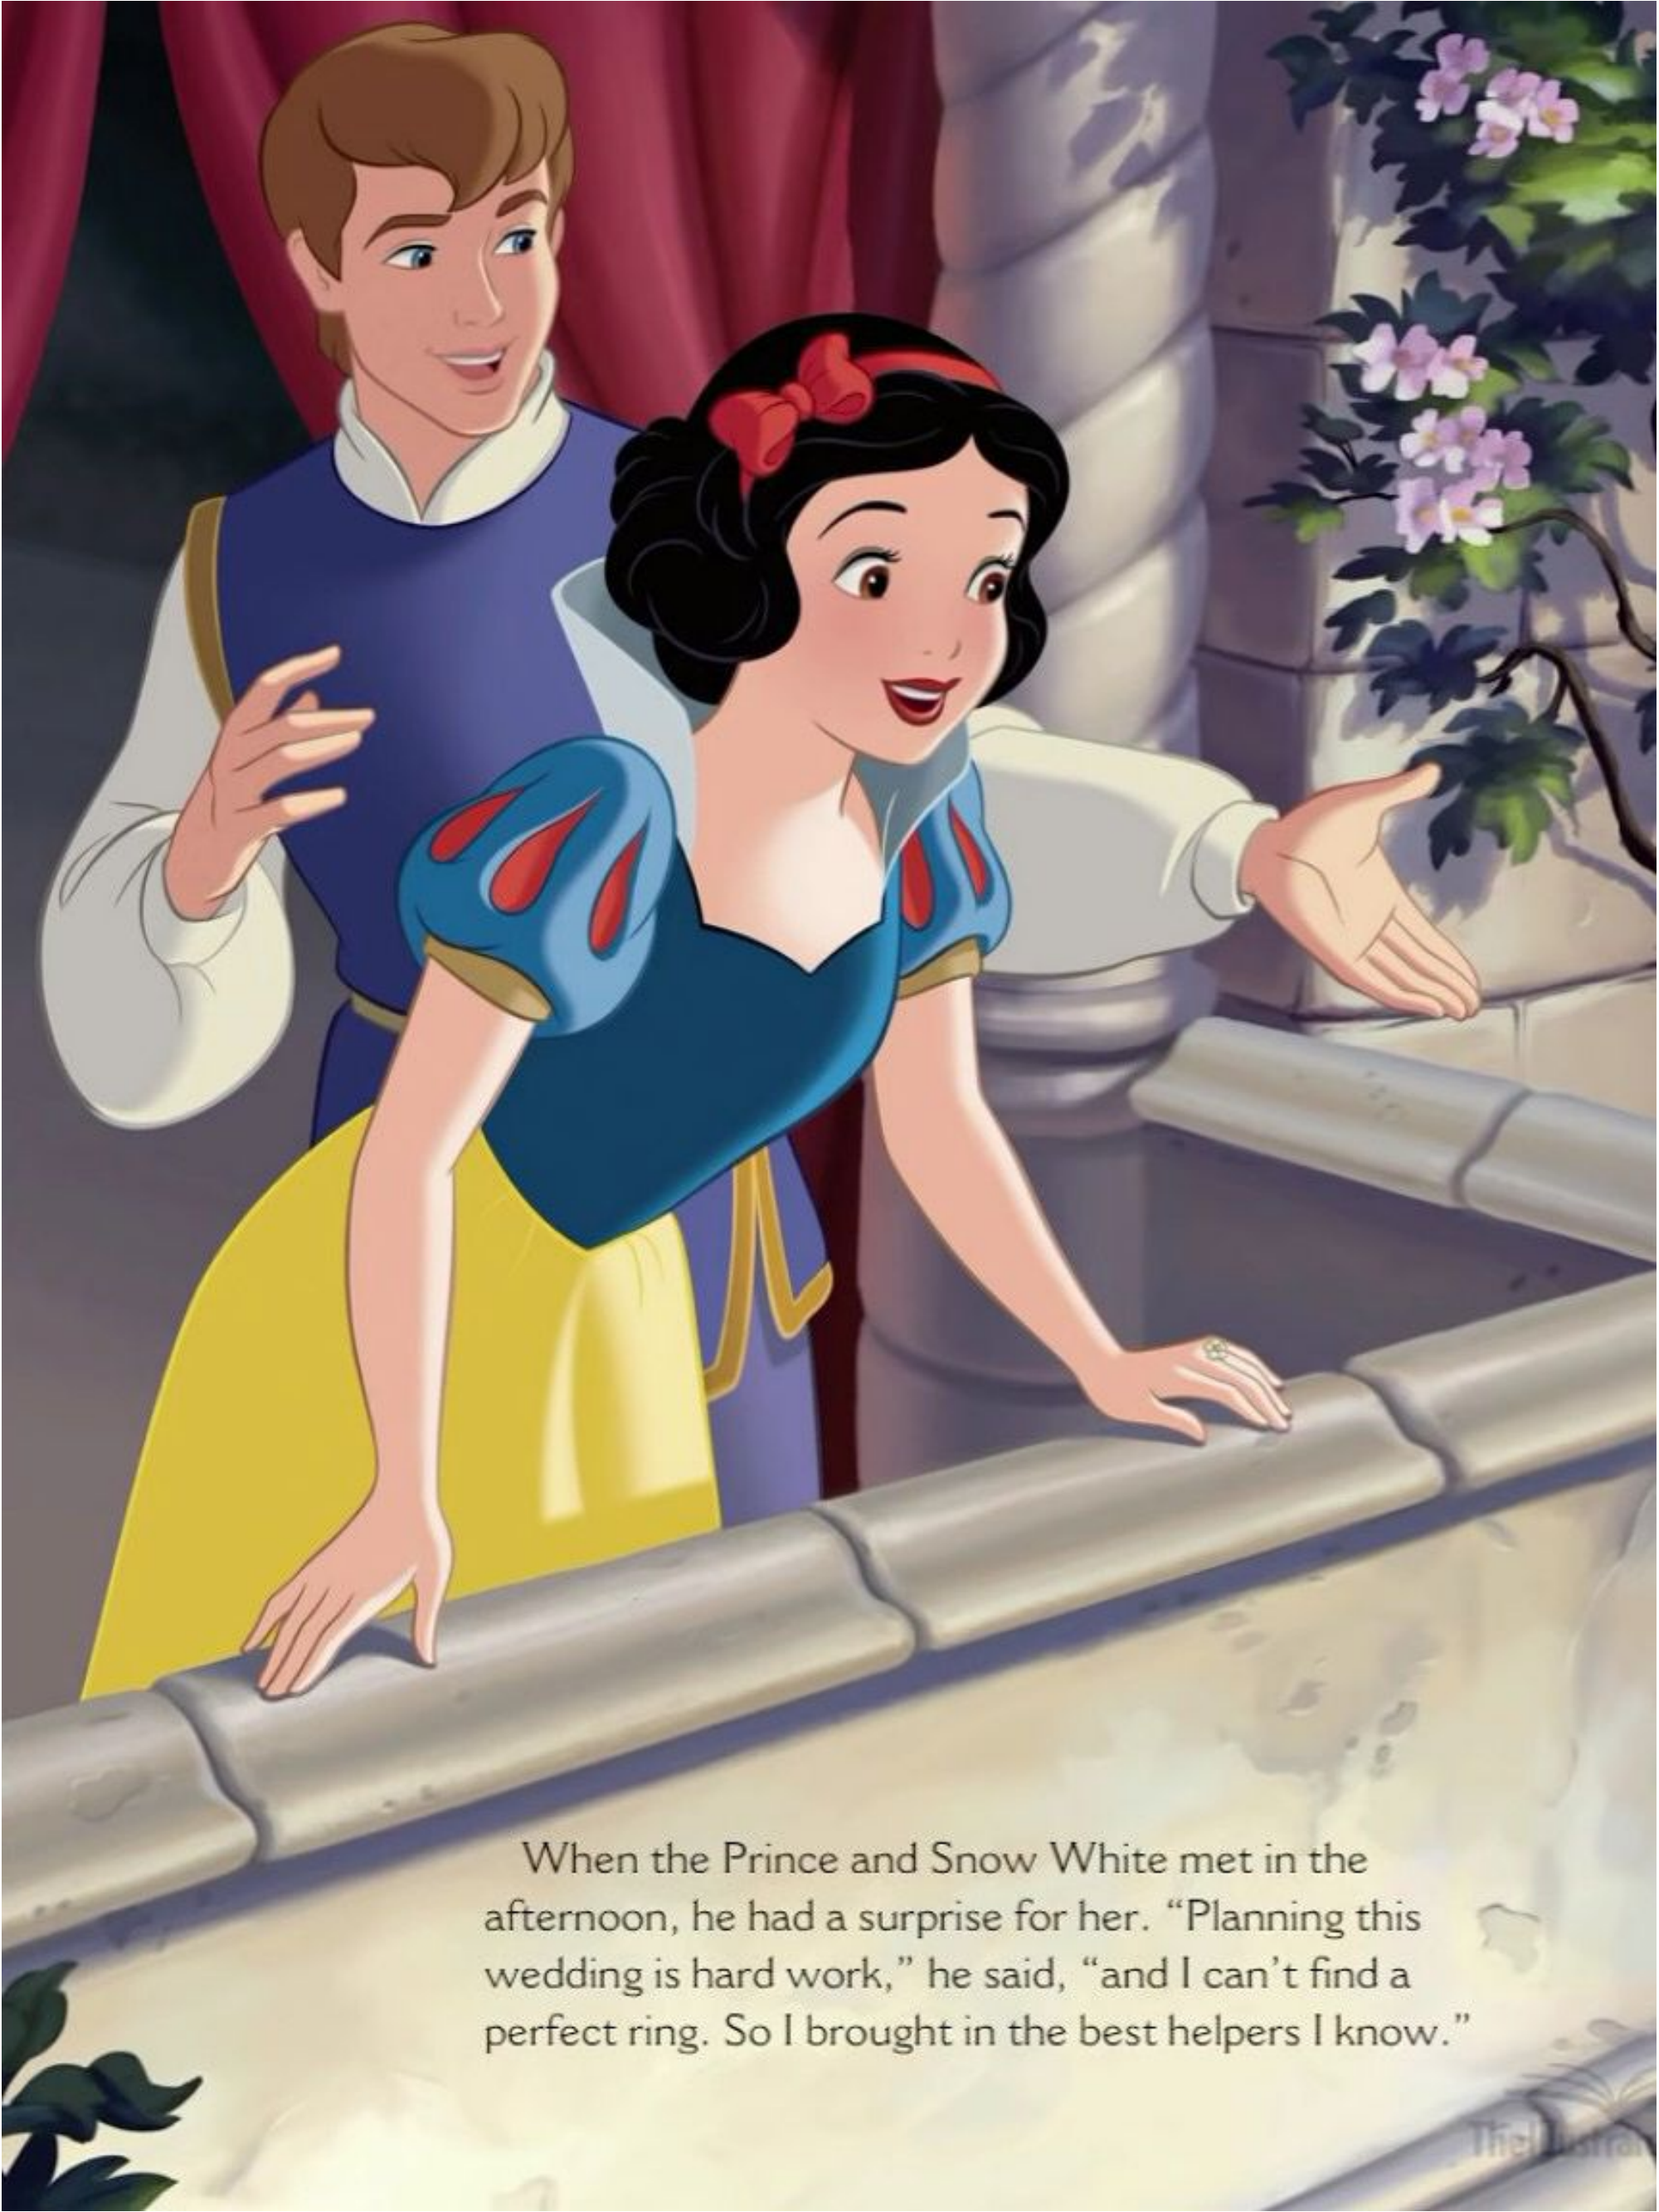

At the royal dressmaker's, a seamstress advised,
"White, of course!"

"And a very long train," said the dressmaker. "She'll be Queen someday, after all!"

Snow White didn't know what to say. She wasn't sure she wanted to wear an elaborate dress—or have a fancy cake or carriage.

When the Prince and Snow White met in the afternoon, he had a surprise for her. "Planning this wedding is hard work," he said, "and I can't find a perfect ring. So I brought in the best helpers I know."

There stood the Seven Dwarfs, with all of Snow White's forest friends!

"Oh, why didn't I see it before?" she said. "It's simple: I'm marrying my true love. This wedding should be simple, too."

"And sweet!" said Happy.

Everyone agreed and was ready to work!

The next day as Sneezy, Doc, and Sleepy helped Snow White redesign her wedding dress, Dopey and Happy helped the Prince mine the perfect diamond.

Later, Snow White talked with the royal chef.
“Of course your idea for a white cake is lovely, but if you don’t mind, how about adding berries?”

Bashful blushed and nodded.

“It’ll be a little more like one of them pies!” said
Grumpy.

When the wedding day arrived, Snow White's forest friends helped her get dressed. The royal dressmaker was surprised by the new gown, but he couldn't stop smiling. It was just right for this bride.

Snow White joined her seven friends.
“Snappy—er—happy times!” said Doc.
“Why, thank you, Doc. But I could use some company,” said Snow White. “Would you all be willing to walk with me?”

As the birds whistled a song, the Seven Dwarfs did their best to walk their beloved Snow White down the aisle to her prince.

After the Prince and Snow White exchanged vows, he gave her a sparkling diamond ring. Carved into the band was a floral pattern.

"Oh, it's adorable," said Snow White.

At the wedding reception, even Grumpy smiled along with the royal chef as the couple took a bite of their delicious wedding cake.

The only part of the celebration that wasn't so simple was the first dance. Everyone joined in the fun!

At the day's end, Snow White and the Prince rode off in love. Their wedding day had been simple and sweet. And their future was simple, too—they'd live happily ever after.